COUNCIL SEEKS BIDS FOR IMPROVEMENTS AT THE CITY PARK

The City Council met last Tuesday evening, owing to the regular meeting date falling on a holiday, all members being present.

The Council ordered a call for bids on the paving of the upper portion of the Daly City Park. This is the first step necessary to complete a much needed play ground for our children.

A petition from several residents at the corner of Brunswick and Oliver streets, asking that Daly City drop the property there off the assessment roll was received. They claimed this action should be taken by our city owing to the fact that their property is mostly in San Francisco and they pay the regular tax there. The Council, through the city attorney, advised the petitioners to pay all back taxes to Daly City and then ask for a refund, as the law requires the tax collector to make such collection.

A communication was received from the fire commissioners, requesting a 40-foot extension ladder for Company No. 3 fire engine, and a new roof on Company No. 4 fire house, and the request was granted.

The fire chief was instructed to notify the Fire Underwriters of the new fire apparatus now in service, and see if a reduction in rates can be secured through the installation of this well equipped engine.

The Council spoke of the splendid showing made by the Native Sons and Daughters of Daly City at the Admission day celebration in Oakland, and instructed the city clerk to communicate with these organizations and thank them for the way they represented this district.

Several complaints have come in about dumping of garbage on the streets and roads by passing motorists, and the Council requests anyone seeing this done to report the number of the machine to the police department and our judge will do the rest.

Help your city by co-operating with its officers.

COUPLE UNITED AT BRILLIANT WEDDING

The wedding of Miss Alice Leona Winant, daughter of Mrs. L. Winant, of Felton street, San Francisco, to Mr. Anthony D. Milano, son of Mr. and Mrs. B. Milano, of Templeton avenue, Daly City, took place at the Church of St. Elizabeth, at 7 o'clock last Saturday evening, September 8. The Rev. Father Clifford officiated at the ceremony in the presence of friends and relatives of the bride and groom.

The bride, who was given in marriage by her uncle, Mr. L. Winant, wore a gown of white crepe de chine, prettily trimmed in bands of silver and silver beads. The wedding veil of white lace was held in place with a wreath of orange blossoms and she carried a shower bouquet of orchids and lilies of the valley.

Mrs. Leon Winant, nee Miss Freda Christen, sister-in-law of the bride, was matron of honor, and wore a beige crepe de chine gown trimmed in salmon pink ribbon, forming large flowers around the bottom of the full skirt, and carried pink snapdragons.

Miss Louise Winant, sister of the bride, in pink georgette with flounces of pink tulle and carrying pink roses, and Miss Ferdinande De Mulder in green georgette with flounces of green tulle and carrying yellow roses, were the bridesmaids.

Mr. Leon Winant, brother of the bride, was the best man, and Messrs. Charles Kilhoffer and Mario Johnson were the ushers.

A reception and dance followed the ceremony, being held at Eagles Hall, which was prettily decorated for the occasion. Music for dancing was furnished by a six piece orchestra. At midnight a buffet supper was served to several hundred guests.

Upon the entrance of the bride and groom the orchestra played the wedding march, after which they played "I Love You Truly," and the bride and groom waltzed alone under the colored lights, making a very pretty effect.

Mr. and Mrs. Milano will be at home on Brunswick street after a honeymoon spent in Yosemite Valley.

JEFFERSON HIGH P. T. A. HAS INTERESTING MEETING

The Jefferson Union High School P. T. A. held its first meeting of the school year on August 23. All the officers were present, and there was a good attendance of members. After the business of the evening, a pleasant social hour was enjoyed by all. This association meets on the fourth Thursday of each month. Come and get acquainted with the teachers and the parents of the boys and girls with whom your child associates.

JEFFERSON WILL HAVE UP TO DATE BUILDING

"Jefferson Union high school will be able to boast of one of the most up-to-date shop buildings in the whole state of California." This remark was made to the local high school board of education by Mr. Andrew P. Hill, Jr., chief of the division of school house planning of the California State Department of Education, at a special meeting of the board held on Wednesday evening. Trustees Bentley, Brown, Gehring, Jensen and Twisten were all present.

Principal James Ferguson had been authorized by the members of the board of education to request Mr. Hill to meet with them in conference regarding the shop plans already submitted by Architect W. H. Weeks. Accompanying Mr. Hill was Dr. John C. Almack, Professor of Education in Stanford University. Both Dr. Almack and Mr. Hill are recognized experts in school organization as well as in school planning.

The board meeting was set for 5:30, so that there would be ample time to go over the whole school site, and give consideration to the local surroundings as well as to the contour of the land, etc., before taking up the matter of location for the shop building.

Mr. Truman Bentley, president of the board, outlined the problems which confronted the school in providing educational facilities for the young people of Jefferson Union high school district, and stated that it was the desire of the board to get the most expert advice in the matter of constructing buildings. The board of education and Principal Ferguson realized, he said, that Mr. Hill was familiar with the problems of building throughout the whole state, and could help the local board avoid the costly mistakes that had been made in other communities. For that reason he assured Mr. Hill that the Jefferson Union high school board would rely upon his judgment very greatly in all building matters connected with the school.

Mr. Hill, at the outset, stated that it was the purpose of his department to give expert advice in all matters pertaining to school planning, and that he would gladly render all possible assistance to the local board. He complimented the board upon its method of procedure—that it was giving thorough consideration to the details of the plans for a shop building before letting the contract for its construction. Changes are always the most costly part of the building program and should always be avoided if possible, he said. Besides, he emphasized the fact that it is by the most careful planning beforehand that floor and wall space can be used economically and efficiently.

Both Mr. Hill and Dr. Almack spoke of the necessity of taking into account the future needs of the school in connection with any construction now being contemplated. The Jefferson Union high school district, and particularly Daly City, is a community that is growing by leaps and bounds, and to fail to take notice of this and make plans for the future would be a great and costly mistake, they said.

It was, therefore, suggested that the board ask the architect to prepare a sketch of the present plant with a suggested sketch of what would be necessary to keep pace with the future growth of the school so that the shop building might be placed where it would not interfere with the proper and logical development of the present academic building when that time comes.

Mr. Hill went into detail, explaining the educational principles involved in the correct arrangements of the interior of the shop building. Mr. Hackley, instructor in auto mechanics, explained the present needs of his department, and made suggestions regarding the furnishing of equipment, its placing, etc.

Mr. Hill took with him the blueprints for further study and in order to confer with Architect Weeks before making his final recommendations in detail to the board.

Speaking of the improvements already made on the grounds, Mr. Hill and Dr. Almack complimented the board of education highly. They believe that the football field is a valuable asset not only to the school but to the whole community. It is one of the finest in the state of California, they say.

Regarding the changes made in the grounds in the front of the school, Dr. Almack was particularly pleased. He says the board has improved the appearance 100 per cent by eliminating the walk that cut the lawn in two sections. It is now one piece stretching along the entire front of the building. Also the laying of a sidewalk along the drive from Mission street to the building has added to the convenience and safety of the students, according to Dr. Almack.

After the meeting, supper was served by the ladies of the board,

Good-by

COURT DENIES PLEA OF SCHOOL DISTRICT FOR TAX INCREASE

Under a decision of the State Supreme Court, filed Wednesday, the Burlingame school district was denied a writ of mandate which would have required the San Mateo county board of supervisors and the county auditor to readjust the district tax rate.

It was contended that the rate that had been levied by the board of supervisors after the district submitted its school budget was insufficient to care for teachers' salaries and other expenses.

Petition for the writ seeking to compel the board of supervisors to levy a tax in excess of 30 cents for the maintenance of the Burlingame schools was filed on Thursday of last week by Thomas H. Breeze. The petition contended that the 30 cent rate is inadequate for the maintenance of the schools.

The suit, which was of state wide interest, was a test case to determine the adaptability of the law limiting elementary schools to a 30 cent rate limitation.

The Burlingame school district needs $111,354 as necessary for its school purposes for the 1928-29 school year. To raise this amount the board would have been compelled to levy a tax of approximately 42 cents. It is understood that the school district was allowed under the 30 cent limit $104,370, approximately $7,000 under the school's requirements.

County Superintendent of Schools, Pansy Jewett Abbott reported that here are 150 pupils registered in the Burlingame district who were without teachers.

The State Board of Education, through Sam Cohn, deputy superintendent of instruction, assisted Mr. Breeze because of the state wide interest in the outcome of the suit.

Attorney General U. S. Webb has rendered an opinion to the San Mateo county supervisors that the 30 cent limit is constitutional.

WAR VETERANS WILL SUPPORT BOXING LAW

H. W. Winn, Jr., Vice-Commander Veterans of Foreign Wars of the United States, Department of California and Nevada, has notified the California Veterans' Aid League, San Francisco, that the organization is lining up its forces in the fight against Amendment 5 on the November ballot.

"I wish at this time to commend the activities of your organization in behalf of the old, the infirm veterans supporting the present boxing law," says Winn in a letter to the league. "The V. F. W. has gone on record as opposed to the repeal of the present boxing law, and all posts have been instructed to do all in their power to maintain the present law." The Veterans of Foreign Wars in backing the fight against Amendment 5, which would repeal the present law providing state commission controlled boxing, was induced by consideration of the following arguments submitted by the league which included:

1. State control of boxing under the able supervision of the State Athletic Commission has resulted in the elevation of the sport to the highest plane it has ever occupied in the state's history, in direct contrast to the scandals and law evasion that marked the four-round so-called "amateur" bouts.

2. Under the present law a 5 per cent tax on gross gate receipts of all boxing and wrestling shows goes to the support and care of disabled and down-and-out veterans of all wars. The sum of $481,376.75 is the amount realized from this tax to date, and this year $171,000 is being expended on new concrete barracks at the Veterans' Home at Yountville, Cal., as the first unit of a comprehensive building program.

3. Repeal of the present boxing law would mean a return to the system by which boxers and boxing shows were under absolutely no supervision or control.

4. Government authorities and educators recognize boxing as a sport aiding in building strong healthy manhood. Records of the American Expeditionary Forces show that from December, 1918, to April, 1919, no less than 730,614 soldiers participated in supervised boxing matches, and that spectators totaled 7,789,491.

Abnormality of Groups Can Easily Be Turned Into Collective Insanity

By PROF. E. A. BURTT, University of Chicago.

THE individual member of any class, profession or religious group, no matter how intelligent or conscientious he may be, is seldom able to realize the errors and fallacies believed in by his own group as a whole. Group abnormality, sometimes becoming a case of collective insanity, is a force so powerful that it can impel people to believe in even destructive ideas, and what is worse, act upon them.

Only by the assumption of group abnormality can we explain the periodic outbursts of fanaticism and militaristic frenzy which have worked such havoc upon the human race.

It is by the consideration of this phenomenon that we are able fully to appreciate the extraordinary achievement of the scientific attitude in developing the habit of arriving at truth through the use of some tentative statement termed an "hypothesis."

An hypothesis represents what the scientific guesses may be the truth, and which he employs as a working attitude pending the final results of experiment and observation. If demonstrated wrong, the hypothesis is discarded for a new and better statement.

Such an attitude is directly opposite the view derived from theology, which starts with faith in something considered eternally and unchangeably true, and extends this faith to include every detail in the scheme. The scientific attitude is that of an agnostic, which does not mean atheist, but rather the open mind.

Habit of working by tentative statements has developed a true "law of progress" for humanity, the open-minded attitude which will eventually enable mankind to control many future conditions now regarded as beyond human power.

Too Many Make Religion a Matter of Their Personal Comfort

By DR. ALVIN E. MAGARY, Detroit.

"I went to that church a few times," said the good, pious man, "and I got great profit from the services; but the seats were rather uncomfortable and I decided to go elsewhere."

His remark is a commentary on more things in modern life than our choice of a church. There was a time when our fathers would brave blizzards and sit through a two-hour sermon in a church in which a corner stove struggled vainly against a zero temperature. Today we insist on being comfortable whether we are righteous or not.

I wonder if it would not be profitable for us to remember that religion has not always been a matter of comfortable listening to a comfortable preacher and a comfortable choir. Our forefathers, many of them, paid dearly for the convictions by which they ruled their lives. Some of them were imprisoned, in prisons where the seats were uncomfortable. Some sat in the stocks, and had no cushions under them. Some laid their heads, not on soft pillows, but on the block. Some were warmed for their faith, it is true, but the fires that warmed them also roasted them alive.

Aren't you being a little too insistent that life shall be a comfortable thing? Do any of us suppose that Almighty God is interested in providing for us a comfortable seat in His sanctuary? When we complain about the life we live, do we forget that our fathers bought it for us with blood and sacrifice?

Modern Child Evincing Increasing Disrespect for Law and Authority

By MISS ANNIE DEMAREST, Veteran New York Teacher.

Sparing the rod has indeed spoiled the child. I know it is old-fashioned, but I do think the present generation has gone entirely too far in this so-called freedom.

I think the greatest change has come in the attitude of the children. Of course, our teaching methods have changed, and our teaching philosophy has been reversed since I started work 51 years ago. The state, for instance, which never used to interfere, constantly demands more and more of the teachers. There has been continual growth.

But the greatest change has come in the children themselves. They still have the same instincts; they do not have the same training. There is no longer the respect for law and authority among them. There is more freedom, more independence and less obedience. They have little respect for their parents, and, of course, less for teachers and for those with whom they come in contact outside.

"Getting By" in College False Doctrine for the Student to Hold

By DEAN SCOTT H. GOODNIGHT, University of Wisconsin.

The legend that "getting by" in college courses is sufficient is a false doctrine. Don't let anybody tell you that it doesn't pay to put great effort into one's college work, that college work is impracticable and that to "get by" is all that is necessary.

It pays very handsomely to do high-grade work in college, both in satisfactions and recognitions obtained during the courses, and in good positions in the business and professional world that are always waiting for men who have excelled in their college work.

The mental satisfaction of a job well done will bring not only momentary sense of triumphs because of achievement, which is gratifying in itself, but it is also accompanied by a consciousness of increased power and renewed confidence in yourself. It becomes a big factor in the all-important process of our growth and development.

Science Making for Peace Because of Distribution of Balance of Power

By DR. W. LEE LEWIS, Inventor.

If science served warfare only, it would indeed be a human curse, but science has lessened the possibilities of war by providing means of protection and peaceful internal expansion.

Even as applied to warfare, science makes for peace because it gives the balance of power to the more advanced races. Tangible instruments of war, controllable by agreement, undoubtedly will play a smaller part in future warfare than less tangible ones, battleships and fortresses will be less potent agents than airplanes and chemicals.

Science makes war less romantic and more deadly. It is, therefore, fundamentally an ally of peace. The potentialities of scientific warfare make it increasingly unpopular.

CALIFORNIA NEWS BRIEFS

After two years' labor, a group of volumes, each covering one State institution, is rapidly nearing completion and will be placed in the State Capitol for reference, A. R. Heron, director of finance, announced recently. The books contain surveys of all State-owned lands, with photographs of each building forming a unit of the State institution to which the volume is devoted being included. Heron estimated the cost of all the work at $8000.

Consolidated Aircraft Corporation of Oakland has completed plans for a passenger service over a loop route from Oakland to Vallejo, Napa, St. Helena, Santa Rosa, Petaluma, San Rafael and Sausalito. The service, according to President J. L. Mayberry, will be in operation within 90 days.

Declaring himself as "feeling bully," Hiram W. Johnson, California's senior representative in the United States senate, celebrated his sixty-second birthday anniversary at San Francisco last week. The day was marked by a family dinner and the receipt of telegrams from all over the country celebrating Senator Johnson upon his natal day. The senator also enjoyed a swim at his club.

Marking another forward stride in commercial aviation on the Pacific Coast, announcement was made last week that giant four-motored planes carrying 25 passengers, soon will be in service between Vancouver and San Francisco. The announcement came from H. Clay Bernard, San Francisco capitalist, who was given the position a few days ago of executive vice president of the Union Air Lines, Inc. Bernard is president of a coast-wide securities institution.

Plans for a $7,000,000 reservoir and power plant on Bear Creek, a tributary of Mokelumne River, were revealed a few days ago in a request of the Pacific Gas and Electric Company for a State water diversion permit. The power corporation asked the State division of water rights to authorize diversion of 200 cubic feet per second from Bear and Cold creeks, Amador County.

California has one of the lowest maternal mortality rates in the Nation, with 5.2 deaths of mothers per thousand births, Dr. Walter M. Dickie, State director of public health, announced recently. The city of Santa Ana went through the last year with no maternal deaths whatever, Dr. Dickie said, and San Jose, Santa Monica, Pasadena, San Diego, San Francisco, Fresno and Berkeley all had rates lower than that of the State as a whole.

The call of learning is supplanting the "call of the wild" now for approximately 100,000 more young Californians than ever before. So Walter Morgan, State school statistician, a few days ago estimated that in school enrollment for the fall of 1928 over that of last year. And it is the flapper rather than her baby sisters who is augmenting the new school rolls. In an effort to be "wiser than formerly, the sheikhs and shebas in constantly increasing numbers are tarrying to "go through high school."

State highway work already placed under contract this biennium, or pending immediate action, involves expenditures of $15,720,144.97, Bert B. Meek, director of public works, reported to Governor Young a few days ago. The new construction work amounts to $7,124,900.11, and the reconstruction operations total $8,595,244.86. Projects calling for disbursement of an additional $2,900,000 will be advertised between now and the end of this month, Meek said. Approximately $1,700,000 of that total will be construction work.

Qualification of 178 candidates for California licenses as physicians and surgeons and fourteen applicants for credentials as chiropractors was announced a few days ago by Dr. Charles B. Pinkham, executive officer of the State Board of Medical Examiners. Paul P. E. Michael, graduate of McGill Medical College, Montreal, Canada, with a rank of 91.89 per cent, led all applicants examined by the State board at San Francisco last month. Claire E. Brownberger, a Los Angeles girl, graduate of the College of Medical Evangelists, was second.

All departments formerly housed in buildings not owned by the State in Sacramento have been moved to quarters in State owned buildings, A. R. Heron, director of finance, informed Governor Young a few days ago. The majority of offices moved now occupy space in the North Capitol Extension building, which is practically completed. The South building, nearing completion, now houses the Department of Education and the State Library. By the middle of this month quarters will have been assigned the attorney general and the Third District Court of Appeals, Heron declared.

Permission to increase its capitalization $930,000 was granted the California Water Service Company by the State Railroad Commission a few days ago. The company, which operates in twenty-five California towns, including Fresno, Bakersfield, Visalia, Chico, Redding, Willows and Petaluma, is already capitalized for $12,000,000. The new capital will be obtained by the issue of $550,000 in 5 per cent first mortgage bonds, $190,000 6 per cent accumulative preferred stock and $190,000 common stock. It will be used to finance improvements and replenish the treasury of the corporation.

BOTTOMLEY BEST FIRST BASEMAN

Ranked as First in National League Because of Hitting.

At least two of our present day first base performers in the majors stand out in a class by themselves. It is no secret, even to the fan who has only occasional outbursts of baseball fever, that one of this pair is James Bottomley of the St. Louis Cardinals; the other Lou Gehrig of the Yankees, writes Irving Vaughan, in the Chicago Tribune. They are pre-eminent because they are masters of the art of laying the wood against the leather, it being conceded, also proved, that the man with the punch can take the play away from the fellow whose chief stock in trade is fielding.

While the task of separating the above duo from the other front door attendants of the two majors involves no drain upon the mental faculties of the so-called expert (who frequently writes only what he hears roll from the tongue of a man long experienced in the diamond profession), it is quite another job to distinguish between Mr. Bottomley and Mr. Gehrig.

There is so little difference in the skill of the two men that determining one from the other as the outstanding first sacker of the season might well be decided by drawing a slip of paper from a plug hat. Or you might even determine which has the better disposition and make your choice accordingly.

In the opinion of the writer Bottomley is entitled to a rating slightly higher than the young man who is doing his bit to make the Yanks too formidable for the rest of the American league. This choice is made, not on figures, which can be made to prove almost anything in baseball, but on items that are not apparent to, or even considered, by the enthusiast who pays the freight and sits in the grandstand. The chief of these is that Bottomley is the attack of the Cardinals. Gehrig is part of the Yank attack that is formidable mainly because of the power of Ruth.

It is an established fact in baseball that there is a sort of psychological advantage in hitting immediately behind a batter of Ruth's caliber.

Bottomley came to the Cards from Syracuse in August, 1922, for three players and a cash consideration. During his career in the majors he has maintained a batting average of .331.

Bottomley played in the world's series against the Yankees in 1926, hitting at a .345 clip for the seven games.

Beginner Learns Quick If He Has Confidence

George Von Elm, the amateur golf champion, said at a dinner in Los Angeles:

"The beginner learns golf more quickly if he has confidence in himself, but self-confidence is what most beginners lack."

"A beginner was getting ready to swipe at a ball one day when his caddy said:

"Hold on, boss. Man in front. You must always yell 'Fore' if there's anybody in front of you when you're going to hit the ball."

"Oh, rubbish!" said the beginner. "How the dickens do I know when I'm going to hit the ball?"

Peckinpugh Signs for Another Year as Pilot

The reappointment of Roger Peckinpugh to pilot the Cleveland Indians in 1929 was looked upon with favor in Cleveland baseball circles, despite the fact that the Indians have been playing some of the poorest ball in the American league.

The announcement that Peckinpugh had been signed for another year was made by Alva Bradley, president of the club, who said the appointment was not only "a gesture of confidence in Peck but was intended to encourage him to forget the present disastrous campaign."

Blame Ice Cream

Ice cream, it now appears, froze the United States out of many events in the Olympic games. The United States Lines London news bureau quotes Charles H. Heldorn, chief steward of the President Roosevelt, as saying of the athletes: "They can't seem to get enough ice cream. Some of them eat it four times a day. Yes they do eat. Steaks, chops and tons of ice cream. I've never seen anything like it."

TURNING THE TABLES

It was Maloney's first morning in his new job and a practical joker, seizing his opportunity as the Irishman was absent, drew a lifelike portrait of a donkey's head on the back of Maloney's jacket.

Later on, Maloney picked up his coat and was in the act of scrambling into it, when a burst of derisive laughter made him hesitate and examine the garment.

Suddenly he caught a glimpse of the chalk marks.

PEACE PACT SIGNED

Varying shades of opinion have been expressed concerning the ultimate effect of the peace treaty signed on August 27 in Paris by the representatives of fifteen leading nations of the world. Some see in this action a real hope for permanent world peace, while others are less optimistic and some frankly skeptical.

This first diplomat to affix his signature to the document was Foreign Minister Stresemann of Germany, followed by Secretary of State Kellogg of the United States and the other representatives in turn. Immediately after the treaty had been signed, invitations were sent to forty-seven other nations, including Soviet Russia, to join in the pact. How many of these will respond favorably can not be told immediately.

Because of opposition in certain quarters, it has already been hinted that efforts will be made to prevent a ratification of the treaty by the Senate of the United States, but whether this opposition will develop any considerable strength is problematical.

The treaty places no penalty on going to war except such as may be inflicted through public opinion, nor does it deny a nation the right of self defense if attacked. The nations merely declare that they "condemn recourse to war and renounce it as an instrument of national policy," and also "agree that the settlement of disputes of whatever nature or of whatever origin which may arise between them shall never be sought except by pacific means."

Whatever effect the treaty may have depends on the good faith with which the nations live up to these simple statements. If, as some contend, the treaty will do little good, it is difficult to see how it can do any harm. The fact that such traditional enemies as France and Germany have signed such a compact is at least encouraging.

Denouncing a man is hardly more offensive than praising his rival.

Quickest way to make something popular is to pass a law against it.

BROAD-GAUGE CHARITY

In the will of the late Aaron Naumberg of New York, large sums were left to a wide range of charitable and educational institutions, reflecting the broad sympathies of this son of a Jewish rabbi, who had amassed great wealth.

Jewish charities were naturally remembered liberally in Mr. Naumberg's last testament, but Protestant and Catholic charitable institutions also came in for a generous share. Besides, he gave a substantial sum to the Tuskegee Institute for negroes, to Harvard University, to the American Museum of Natural History, to the Philharmonic Society, and other worthy enterprises.

More and more are great captains of industry and business getting the habit of leaving portions of their wealth to be used for the public welfare. Their bequests to educational, religious, scientific and charitable institutions have been vast beyond computation, either in terms of dollars or in their value in the betterment of social conditions.

Among all who have thus contributed of their wealth to these worthy objects, few have illustrated a finer spirit of human brotherhood than Aaron Naumberg, a Jew.

A NEEDED INVENTION

From Paris comes news of an invention which should be hailed with enthusiasm by the motoring public. It is an automatic jack to be operated from the instrument board of the automobile.

In case of a flat tire, the driver may raise the wheel by simply pressing a button. Each wheel is supplied with a jack in the form of a steel cylinder fitted with a double telescopic piston. When not in use the lower end of the jack is drawn up level with the axle, so as not to reduce the road clearance.

The advantage of having a car equipped with such a device would be greater than its mere convenience of operation. The jack would be there when it was needed. Thieves could not steal it, and neighbors could not borrow it.

VETERAN PENSIONERS

Since the recent death in Lodi, Ohio, of Augustus Markle at the age of 101, but three surviving veterans of the Mexican war remain on the pension rolls. They are William F. Buckner, of Paris, Mo., aged 100; Owen Thomas Edgar, of Washington, D. C., and Richard D. Howard, of Sterling City, Texas, both aged 97.

But while there are only these three veterans remaining, there were 970 Mexican war widows drawing pensions last year; also seventeen widows of the War of 1812.

The greatest number of pensioners ever on the rolls was in 1898, when 393,714 veterans and widows drew $144,651,879. But owing to greater liberality of the pension laws 489,942 veterans and widows drew $230,152,712 in 1927.

While no one will begrudge these veterans and their dependents the pensions allowed by the national government, the fact that these large sums must be raised by taxation constitutes an additional argument for peace. Every war involves not only its immediate costs in lives and treasure, but saddles upon the backs of future generations enormous pension bills which national honor demands shall be paid.

We are still paying pensions on account of the War of 1812, after the lapse of 116 years. When will pensions on account of the World war end? And in the meantime, what wars are to be fought?

Before they begin rattling the sword too loudly, statesmen should think of these things.

BURDENING THE MAILS

That the postal service will have a $100,000,000 deficit this year is not due to any particular fault of the service itself, but rather to the weakness of the government operation of that great enterprise. It is generally believed that free from red tape and unscientific methods which obtain at present, the postal service could be made self-sustaining without increasing rates or reducing efficiency.

But such management would not transport carloads of the Congressional Record containing political addresses, free of charge. It would not furnish printed envelopes at less than cost. It would not select its most important executives on the strength of their political activity. It would not do many other wasteful things now being done.

During the present campaign it is reported from Washington that all records for distribution of political mail at public expense are being broken. One Congressman who was seeking a Senatorial nomination is reported to have sent out twelve tons of free mail before the primary; and another member is said to have sent out ten tons of his speeches in the same manner. It is believed that before the campaign ends more than sixty tons of this free political mail will be going out of Washington each day.

Politicians of both parties are responsible for this abuse of their official positions. The public pays the bill. What else is an easy-going public for, anyway?

BAN ON BILLBOARDS

From many sections of the country come further reports of official action against the billboard nuisance, which has done more to destroy the natural beauty of the countryside than any other agency devised by man.

A vigorous campaign against billboards is being waged by several national organizations, the women's clubs being particularly active in the movement. They are in many instances appealing to the advertisers direct, showing them that a billboard which defaces the scenery makes ill-will instead of friends for the firm resorting to this form of publicity.

In Georgia the highway board recently adopted a resolution providing "that all advertising signs be prohibited on the rights of way, and that in every practicable way the beautification of the highways be encouraged by the planting of trees and the clearing away of all objectionable and unsightly objects."

The utter disregard for the rights of the public which has been displayed by the billboard people have brought upon them the just indignation of all lovers of beauty. Advertising billboards along the highways and in residential sections of cities and towns should not be tolerated in a community which pretends to be civilized.

NELSON'S FLAGSHIP

A pigmy in comparison with modern fighting craft, but rich in historic interest, the British ship Victory, flagship of Lord Nelson at the battle of Trafalgar in which he lost his life, has been restored to its original condition.

Launched in 1765, the Victory sailed the seas for 157 years until 1922, since which time the work of restoration has been in progress. But she will sail no more, being now permanently installed in dry dock at Portsmouth as a naval shrine and flagship of the port.

The Victory is only 227 feet long, with 52 feet beam and a tonnage of 2,162. The United States liner Leviathan is about thirty times as large. But through Nelson's genius and daring the Victory became one of the most famous fighting ships of all time and an inspiration to British sailors of each succeeding generation.

THE VALUE OF HIGHWAYS

"Rome was only as great as her highways, a keen minded historian has pointed out. He was right," says the Grand Forks, North Dakota, Herald.

"As the roads spread, the power and prestige of the nations spread. The Alps were scaled, the territory now occupied by the French republic was covered with a network of hard surfaced highways, and all roads led to Rome.

"The old roads of Caesar's day were built as military roads, of course, but they were used for purposes of the hour and served their end.

"In the United States hard surfaced roads are not needed primarily as military roads, but we are living in the age of the automobile and nobody is going back to the horse and buggy. We travel by motor and move our supplies to a considerable extent by motor. The state with poor roads is behind the times and not abreast with the needs of the age. Progress depends to a considerable extent upon roads, and so long as we burn gasoline and travel on rubber this will continue to hold true.

"GOOD NEWS," BIG MUSICAL HIT, COMING TO CURRAN

The story of "Good News," which Sam Salvin brings to the Curran Theatre, San Francisco, for a limited engagement commencing Monday night, September 17, is fundamentally fascinating and most engagingly written. It tells the experiences, conflicts and achievements of an interesting group of students in a co-educational college during the hectic period of the inter-collegiate football season, and somehow Laurence Schwab and B. G. DeSylvia have managed to capture and delineate the actual enthusiasm and the color of the student body as exemplified on every campus in the country, wherever the undergraduate activities are made manifest.

Not only is the collegiate spirit personified to life, but the various types encountered in every academic institution are portrayed by a cast that has been especially selected with that end in view. The plot of the play revolves around a captain of the football team and a captivating college flirt whose aim in life is to ensnare the athletic heroes who excel in the manly sports. The vivacious little lady engages herself to the football hero and calmly announces that she will marry him if he wins the game. The fact that his heart is interested in a demure little astronomy student is of no moment to the proud and haughty college belle. The dramatic conflict continues from start to finish of the piece, and presents problems that are serious to the young people involved, but so exuberantly funny to the audience that it provokes gales of mirth.

"Good News" is a great singing and dancing hit, and "The Varsity Drag" is but one of six distinct hits. It is presented by a notable case. "Good News" is in two acts with nine scenes. The outstanding surprise comes with the actual playing of a football game on the stage.

ANCIENT GREEK CITY MAKES CONTRIBUTION TO AMERICAN BANKING

R. C. MacArthur, manager of the Daly City branch of the Bank of Italy, has submitted the following article on the Greek department of the bank to the Record:

Argos, fifty miles from Athens and a center of Greek culture 3,000 years before Christ was born, may be considered as having made a definite contribution to the lives and welfare of the thrifty Americans of Greek extraction in California.

The thing that makes ancient Argos pertinent to this story is the fact that Basil Metropoulos, head of the Greek department in the Bank of Italy, and past commander of Hellenic Post No. 230, American Legion, in San Francisco, was born there. Metropoulos is the custodian of approximately 7,000 savings accounts of present and former Greek nationals in California, and keeps close check on the more than $2,700,000 that these accounts represent.

The number of Greeks in California is in excess of 35,000, and they form an important element in the economic makeup of the state. There are many professional men in the list, while the number of well-to-do merchants is considerable. According to the latest tabulation there are 771 grocers, 323 confectionaries and 639 restaurants in San Francisco operated by Greeks, while their participation in many other business enterprises is hardly less imposing.

There are two Greek Orthodox churches in San Francisco. A cathedral, to be known as St. Sophia's in the same city, has been planned. A. P. Giannini, president of the Bancitaly Corporation and founder of the Bank of Italy, is one of the donors to the cathedral fund.

An interesting member of the Greek staff of the bank is Nicholas Mimopoulos, who for three years served as secretary of the Greek embassy in Washington. He attends to the considerable business activity marking the relations between the customers of his department and the Greek Consulate-General in San Francisco, and all other business involving a political aspect.

The first interest of the Greek department is Americanization. Its system for the instruction of prospective citizens is fully as well developed as its system for the handling of savings accounts, remittances and credit transactions. The department supplies court witnesses for such prospective citizens and drills them in court and naturalization procedure. The department was established in 1921 and soon was drawing accounts from all parts of the state. Metropoulos, the manager, has been with the bank for 13 years, the only break in his service coming during the World war when he enlisted and was sent to Camp Lewis. He served there for one year, being discharged with the rank of corporal. He came to America from his native city of Argos as an emigrant boy when he was about 14 years of age.

In addition to its large list of Greek depositors, the bank has many stockholders of that nationality. There is considerable business transacted between the Bank of Italy and the National Bank of Greece and the Bank of Athens, both of the latter institutions having branches in New York.

HYPNOTIZING BOOZERS

Another solution of the liquor problem has been advanced by Prof. Bechterev, a Russian psychiatrist, who claims that he has cured many drunkards through the employment of hypnotism.

His method, as reported in the Paris Times, is to take his patients in groups, lecture them on the evils of strong drink, then hypnotize them while continuing his admonitions. When they awake he gives them some auto-suggestive phrases to be repeated by them several times daily for a month, at the end of which time he says they are cured of the desire for liquor.

That would seem to be a fine system, if it would really work. But in this country it might have a tendency to aggravate the unemployment situation. Both bootleggers and reformers would find themselves without jobs.

BRITISH RADIO CHAIN

If recent recommendations of the British radio authorities be carried out, a wireless service which will girdle the earth will be at the command of the government.

It is recommended that a super-power radio station be established at Canberra, the capital of Australia, as the last link in the world-circling chain, the new station to have a sending radius of 5,000 miles. The nearest stations of equal power are at Singapore and Hong Kong. Great Britain's central station of this great chain is at Hillmorton, near Rugby, England.

Guest Carries Off Valuables in Auto

Norristown, Pa.—Because he did not want to be rude to his guest, although his curiosity was aroused, J. O. Connor did not ask him why he went outdoors so frequently during his visit of several hours.

After the visitor's departure, however, Connor decided that in the future he would give preference to his curiosity, for he discovered that on each trip to the outside the guest had carried along an armful of valuables. The stuff had been loaded into an automobile and carried away.

HOME IS WRECKED BY STRAY MONKEY

Rescuing Officer Is Bitten on Hand.

Columbus, Ohio.—Leaving in his wake a wrecked home and a badly "clawed up" constable, "Jimmy," a man-eating monkey, is back in his master's home following a high adventure climaxed by court proceedings.

Just a month ago "Jimmy" swam the Scioto river. He had made a dash for liberty as his owner, E. R. Burnside, drove in the River road near the quarries. And he was well on the road to freedom when captured by Mike Suto, quarry worker, of Williams road.

Just a month ago, too, another monkey escaped from the Olentangy park. If a reward of $25 hadn't been offered for the other monkey, Suto wouldn't have expected a reward for "Jimmy."

But as it was Suto did. Furthermore, he was bitten when he captured "Jimmy." Such was the status of the case when Burnside went to Suto and asked for his pet. When Burnside said there hadn't been a reward posted, Suto said otherwise and wouldn't give up the monkey.

Then Burnside carried his case to Constable John Guy, but the latter didn't care to take action. "I don't like this monkey business," said Guy. Then Burnside went to the court of Justice of Peace Charles Bowers, where he placed bond and secured replevin papers.

In the meantime "Jimmy" had grown to like his new home and idled away the time picking fleas and catching flies. When Constable H. M. Meeks of Upper Arlington went to serve the replevin papers, he wouldn't give up his new abode.

With one short jump he cleared a table, knocked off a vase. Then he got on a curtain rod and hung by his tail until the pole broke. Finally he got angry and snapped Meeks in the hand. And then he overturned the furniture.

But "Jimmy" is only a monkey and was finally caught. Meeks wouldn't listen to Suto's pleas and refused the quarry worker money for bond for replevin papers.

Tot Loses Faith in Tales of Grownups

Brooklyn, N. Y.—Nine-year-old Louise Bergamo, of this city, has decided finally and finally that there is no trusting grown persons. Louise has long been told that one gets baby brothers and sisters at the five and ten-cent store.

Now Louise has been eager for years to have an infant at her home, so she decided to save her pennies and buy one.

It was just her luck, however, when she passed a certain five-and-ten the other day not to have a cent in her pocket. And there was an unusually fine display of babies in front of the store, too. She looked over them all. Some were too small, some had wrinkled noses, some were too large, one was black, and some were too tiny and red-faced.

But there was one to whose perambulator Louise returned again and again, trying to make up her mind. Here was a baby just exactly right. Why not, thought Louise, take this baby on approval? Things were bought that way sometimes.

Five minutes later Mrs. Fannie Merrin emerged from the store with arms full of bundles. She looked into the perambulator where she had left her ten-month-old Selma. Then she screamed. Selma was kidnapped! Shedding bundles right and left in panic, Mrs. Merrin ran until she found a policeman.

The policeman found several detectives, and the mother and officers set out on a search. One hour later Mrs. Merrin screamed again. She pointed to a bench where a nine-year-old girl sat fondling her Selma, laughing and gurgling. Mrs. Merrin pounced upon the babe and snatched it from the child's arms. Now Louise has lost all faith in the stories of grownups.

Zoroaster's Paradise

Mount Demavend, Persia.

(Prepared by the National Geographic Society, Washington, D. C.)

ANYONE who has carefully examined a map of Asia has probably noticed as one of the few designated features of the portion occupied by Persia the rather striking name, Mount Demavend. The emphasis given to this spot by the absence of many other defined locations throughout the country is quite in keeping with its size, magnificence and importance.

Demavend, which outrivals in proportions any mountain in Europe, is the highest peak in southwestern Asia, for it rises to an altitude of nearly 20,000 feet above sea level. Whether viewed through the mists from the Caspian sea or in the clear, thin air of the Iranian plateau, its snow-capped volcanic cone is a vision of surpassing splendor. But to realize its full grandeur one must see it from the crest of a neighboring range, where the eye can take in with a single sweep the unbroken rise from base to summit, or from some point a hundred miles southward across the desert, where it still dominates the hazy horizon long after the rugged outlines of its surrounding ranges have dissolved in the distance.

Is it to be wondered at that such a superb landmark should hold a prominent place from the earliest times in the legend and the superstition of the Iranian peoples?

As Mount Olympus in Greece was the home of the gods, so the paradise of Zoroaster was the summit of Demavend in Persia. Many legends have developed from its mysterious, fear-inspiring grandeur.

Not only has this great mountain held a lofty place in mythology, but it has cast its far-reaching shadow over many epoch-making events in history. Almost at its very base (in the Median metropolis of Rhages) was born the mother of Zoroaster. It marks the eastern limit of the raids of the Assyrians before the rise to power of the great kings of Persia, and its frowning eastern face overlooked the mountain home of the rising Parthian empire. Alexander the Great paused beneath it in his pursuit of Darius III and sent expeditions through the neighboring passes to subdue the almost impenetrable regions of Hyrcania. Following in his footsteps came Antiochus the Great against the Parthians, and westward along this same route Genghis Khan, Hulagu Khan and Tamerlane led their ravaging Mongol hordes.

Guidepost for Caravans.

Rising not far from a great international highway, Demavend has served as a gigantic guidepost for scores of generations of daring merchants, who, long before Columbus, exchanged the wares of the West and the East by means of their slow-crawling caravans; and its lonely grandeur has gripped the imagination of intrepid adventurers of all ages. Within its shadow a score of great dynasties have risen and fallen, and today it stands as one of the few remaining glories of the Persian empire.

The Elburz mountain range, of which Demavend is an outstanding member, is a unit in the great mountain system that stretches from southern Europe to central Asia, and, with regard to Persia, is the great dividing line between the northern limits of the Iranian plateau and the Caspian depression—a 12,000-foot wall separating a basin 81 feet below sea level from a tableland averaging 4,000 feet in altitude. Beginning near Ardabil, in Azerbaijan, it extends southeastward and eastward more than 500 miles along the southern shores of the Caspian and into Khurasan.

This great mountain wall gives northern Persia the anomaly of two almost contiguous but quite different climates. The moisture of the Caspian basin is excluded from the interior, resulting, on the northern side, in a semi-tropical climate, with an annual rainfall of over 50 inches and luxuriant orange groves and crops of rice and cotton, and, on the mountain-sides themselves, dense forests of hardwood, while the southern escarpment is barren and supplies scarcely enough water for the narrow but fertile desert fringe at its base, with its crops of grain and fruits of the temperate zone.

Demavend itself is about 45 miles northeast of Teheran, in the central of three parallel chains. It towers high above these flanking mountains, whose summits do not exceed two-thirds its elevation, the only mountain peak among endless series of ridges. Its conical form and seemingly even slope of about 45 degrees from top to bottom at once indicate its volcanic nature.

Lofty but Not Hard to Climb.

Strange to say, the exact altitude of Demavend still remains uncertain. Numerous measurements have been made, ranging from 18,000 to over 22,000 feet, an average of the most reliable giving an altitude of about 19,000, though the single measurement commonly accepted is 18,464 feet.

For a mountain of this size, the ascent cannot be considered especially difficult, there being few obstacles other than the cold, the rarity of the atmosphere, and fatigue.

Late summer, with its settled weather and minimum of snow, is, of course, the best time of the year for the ascent. Although Teheran, the nearest large city, is the logical point of departure, the precipitous nature of the western steep necessitates a circuitous approach. A three-day trip takes one across the first range of mountains by the Alborz pass, with an elevation of 9,000 feet; then, between the two ranges, down the well-watered Lar valley, which during its brief summer season supports the flocks and herds of nomadic tent-dwellers, who pass their winters in the plain villages south of Teheran, and skirting the southern base of the mountain itself, to the village of Iken, above the canyon east of Demavend.

This mountain village, which has an elevation of about 6,000 feet, makes an excellent base, for from this point a well-defined trail winds upward 7,000 feet, to where a few shepherds pasture their flocks on the green, moist areas immediately below the snowfields.

This part of the ascent, made either on horse or mule back or afoot, requires the better part of a day, during the early hours of which it is necessary to grope one's way through heavy cloud banks. It is a glorious moment, however, when a sudden movement of the clouds clears the sky and reveals the summit, its great golden cap of sulphur glowing in the sunlight, seemingly so near in the dry, clear atmosphere that one is deceived into thinking that the climb is almost over.

The ascent from this temporary camp to the crater requires about ten hours of actual climbing; so, however one arranges it, part of the trip up or down must be made at night. Although with nightfall the cold becomes extremely severe, there is the compensation of enjoying the wonderfully luminous moonlight of Persia under very unusual conditions.

No Big Glaciers to Traverse.

Considering the aridity of the region, it is not surprising that there are no great glaciers to be traversed; but the remains of glacial formations, in particular one immense chasmlike groove, at the head of which is a huge immovable ice mass, suggest that at one time the country enjoyed a more salubrious climate. The angle of the incline varies only from 40 to 55 degrees, thus rendering the ascent as monotonous and tiring as that of an endless ladder.

The sliding, shifting fields of powdered pumice not far below the summit seriously obstruct progress, for the climbing here is similar to what one would encounter in trying to ascend a steep roof covered with two feet of loose snow. Although it requires one and one-half hours for this portion of the ascent, the descent over the same ground is easily made in four minutes.

The expanse of the great golden sulphur cap, the edge of which is reached a hundred yards below the rim of the crater, is startling. Thousands of tons of sulphur are exposed to view and the fumes which permeate the air are almost nauseating.

The lofty isolation of the great peak makes it an admirable observation point. On a clear day the country spreads out in every direction like a giant relief map on which a comprehensive view of the whole complex arrangement of mountain chains and drainage systems replaces the restricted vision of one on the plains. Close at hand the great inter-mountain valleys and far away to the south the green desert fringe and the vast desert itself are visible, while to the north hover the mists and vapors that rise over the Mazandaran jungles and the Caspian sea.

The KITCHEN CABINET

(© 1928, Western Newspaper Union.)

The excellence of the old-fashioned big family was that no child got an undue amount of attention. The antique idea that the child must work for his parents until the day he was twenty-one was a deal better for the youth than to let him get it into his head that his parents must work for him.—E. WHEN YOU ENTERTAIN

For a hot dish which may be stretched to serve 18 guests the following is well liked:

Chicken Warmen.—Cook until tender in a kettle full of water two five to six-pound chickens, adding an onion to the kettle for seasoning. Season the chickens inside and out before putting into the kettle.

Taste the broth to see that it is not too salty, adding pepper during the cooking. Remove the fowls when well cooked, take off the meat from the bones in neat pieces and place in a dish set into hot water, adding a little of the fat from the kettle to keep moist. Into the kettle now place four good-sized bunches of celery, cleaned and cut into small pieces; cook until fairly tender, but not soft; remove that to a dish to keep hot; now add four packages of noodles, or if homemade, about a double recipe in amount, and cook 15 minutes. Serve a nest of noodles, then a few spoonfuls of celery and top with chicken and a spoonful of gravy. If served on a platter serve in the same way—noodles first, then the celery and top with the chicken.

Rabbit Shortcake.—Clean rabbit and cut into pieces, dredge with flour and put into a frying pan with one-half cupful of butter or bacon fat and four tablespoonfuls of chopped onion. Cook until brown, turning frequently. Remove to a large kettle, cover with stock or water to which five bouillon cubes have been dissolved add two blades of mace, one-half a bay leaf, and cook until tender. Strain, reserve the meat and discard the bones. Melt one-half cupful of butter, add two-thirds of a cupful of flour, and stir until brown. Add to the strained stock, cook five minutes, add salt and pepper and the rabbit meat and keep hot until serving time. Split individual shortcakes, spread with butter, pour over the rabbit and place a ripe olive in the center of each shortcake; garnish with a sprig of parsley.

Prune Salad.—Cut head lettuce into six slices and place on individual plates. Put a tablespoonful of mayonnaise dressing in the center, sprinkle with paprika, surround with a border of chopped nut meats, place outside a ring of finely cut celery, and outside of that on the edge of the lettuce a border of cooked prunes, stoned and cut into pieces.

Do You Like Tongue?

There is no more delicate and nicely flavored meat than a well cooked tongue. It is especially good, sliced very thin and served cold, as a sandwich filling or with a salad and a cup of tea.

Here is a fine dish to serve with the rough ends and broken parts of the tongue:

Tongue Italiane.—Use the broken pieces of a boiled smoked tongue cut into small dice. Mix together two tablespoonfuls of butter, three tablespoonfuls of bread crumbs, one-half teaspoonful of parsley, one teaspoonful of minced onion, one egg yolk, a little salt and pepper to taste. Spread this on the bottom of a glass baking dish. Arrange the diced tongue and a few slices of tongue overlapping each other on top of the mixture. Cover with one cupful of boiled rice which has been well seasoned with butter, pepper, salt and paprika and cover the rice with a top of grated cheese. Set in the oven long enough to get thoroughly hot.

Braised Tongue.—Roll a tongue in salted water for two hours or until tender. Put into cold water for a few minutes to loosen the skin, then remove it and slice into slices three-quarters of an inch thick. Slice boiled ham the same thickness and trim it to match the tongue. Put a little butter in the pan and brown the tongue and ham on both sides. Place these braised slices around a round baking dish, in alternate slices and in the center put fresh cooked and well-seasoned spinach. Cover with buttered bread crumbs and chopped hard-cooked egg yolks. Brown a short time in a hot oven and serve.

Stuffed Tongue.—Roll a tongue until tender. Skin and slit through the larger end; remove part of the meat, enough to make a well to hold the stuffing. Chop the meat that was removed and mix with bread crumbs, butter, salt and pepper and four chopped olives. Fill and place the tongue in a casserole, lay small strips of fat salt pork on top and brown it well in a hot oven. Serve with:

Olive Sauce.—Mix two tablespoonfuls of flour, two tablespoonfuls of butter, one teaspoonful of beef extract, one cupful of boiling water and salt and pepper to taste. Add the boiling water last. Just before taking from the heat add two tablespoonfuls of grated olives.

SMART YOUNG DEER

"Daddy," began the young musk deer, who was in the next yard to his father's yard, "won't you tell me more of what people mean when they speak of musk perfume and then call us the musk deer family?"

"Yes, do explain," said the other deer. "Young Musk Deer has been telling me about it, but he doesn't understand as much as he says you must know and understand."

"Do tell us, Daddy," we want to know more."

"Yes, my son," said Daddy Musk Deer, "I will tell you."

"Good," said the young musk deer. "In our home in India Daddy Deer and grown-up son deer hold this certain sort of perfume which people like to take from us and sell.

"The mothers never carry this perfume, only the vain fathers! And the still more vain sons!"

The young musk deer laughed.

"And as our name has always been the musk deer family they have named the perfume after us."

"The thing which people think is strange about us is that we have two such long teeth in our upper jaws which reach down below our lower jaws."

"It makes us look almost dog-like!"

"We haven't horns, and we thrive better in our Indian homes or in our Chinese homes (if we have happened to have lived in China) than in the zoo here."

"In fact, we're not especially good zoo animals, for we are always received cordially and yet they can't get many of us."

"We're not in the least common. Few of us are here."

"So they are very delighted to see us when they can see us."

"They can't be delighted to see us when they don't see us," laughed the young musk deer.

"Hear the young one talk," said Daddy Musk Deer, "He takes after his smart father, he does."

And the young deer smiled to himself and thought:

"Daddy might have scolded me for being rude, but he likes to say I am smart and take after him."

"That's one time I got out of a scolding!"

So Daddy Musk Deer told all the family history and family ways and the things for which they were famous and the young Musk Deer knew all about his family and his family home after that.

And the people came and admired them for they were rare, indeed, and were considered unusual and interesting.

Historics of Muffins

Suppose you had to record the life histories of hundreds of muffins baked in a long series of experiments to find out how the very best muffins are made—how would you contrive to keep the identity of those good muffins, and not-so-good muffins, and extra good muffins, and really impossible muffins straightened out? Miss Mary Little, a teacher of Tuscaloosa, Ala., who has been studying muffins in order to win her master of art degree, solved the problem by finger printing a cross section of each muffin in her laboratory, says Science Service. The prints were taken with mimeograph ink, very much as finger prints of criminals are made at police headquarters. No two muffins have the same finger prints, Miss Little has found.

Satisfy the Cat

Mother was sick and so father was forced to scurry around and set forth what food he could find. David was much disgusted with the offering and had not hesitated to say so.

During the meal the family cat came into the dining room and was meowing around the table and father was quite surprised to see David reach down, get the cat by the back of the neck, and hold him deliberately over the table.

Upon being asked what he meant by such proceedings, David made reply: "I just thought I'd let him see what we had and he wouldn't be so anxious."

Blind in Cricket Match

Using a ball made of basketwork, with a bell in the center, a cricket match was recently played in London between the East London Home and the School of Blind Children and the Royal Normal College for Blind. The blind bowler first measured the pitch by pacing it. Each batsman was allowed two innings.

"Gate of the Gods"

It was the idea of the Chaldean and Platonic philosophers that the "gate of the gods" was located in Capricornus, says Nature Magazine. Through this gate souls released by death returned to heaven, while through the "gate of men" in the constellation of Cancer, souls descended from heaven in the bodies of men. The positions of these two "gates" correspond to the positions of the two solstices, winter and summer respectively.

Catalina Island Yields Many Ancient Treasures

Avalon, Santa Catalina Island, Cal.—An attempt to follow ancient trails to the long-lost island temple of Chingichinch, the Sun God, has resulted instead in the discovery of the burial place of a small Indian princess of 3,000 years ago and evidence indicating that child sacrifices were made in wholesale fashion by tribes of the Channel Islands, off the coast of California.

Within a stone urn weighing 134 pounds and fashioned skillfully as though by modern tools was found the skeleton of an Indian girl between five and seven years. Her hands apparently had clutched the rim of an urn, whose rich ornamentation of wampum bespeaks her royal lineage.

In a circle with the urn as a center were counted by Prof. Ralph Glidden, curator of the Catalina museum of Channel Island Indians, the skeletons of 64 children buried in tiers four deep with small heads touching each other.

Beneath them was the skeleton of a seven-foot man. A spear blade still was fixed in the ribs.

The sand within the funeral urn had the appearance of ground crystal—apparently, according to the discoverer, a sacred sand used in the burial of Indian royalty—and was far different from that which had sifted over the graves of the other children.

These finds as well as a wealth of obsidian knives, spear points and arrow heads and hundreds of other articles of wampum-inlaid stone and bone have provided material over which Glidden has puzzled since he discovered them.

One thin piece of slate he believes to be a stone map, holes having been drilled to indicate trails to the four main burying grounds on Santa Catalina island.

"It is plausible," Glidden said, "that the strange child burial within the urn and those surrounding it were the result of a natural death of a little girl of high rank and the slaying of 64 attendants and playmates with her. Or they all may have been killed in some religious ceremonial rite."

"It is even possible the princess may have been given some potion and buried alive. The way the small hands clutched the outer rim of the bowl makes this a possibility."

Wampum inlaid in four broken circles on the rim of the urn with "gates" leading to the four points of the compass lead Glidden to believe the burial place may be near the site of the temple of Chingichinch.

Butter Stored for Winter

The Department of Agriculture says that for butter, to be stored for winter use, pasteurized sweet cream should be used, churned at a low temperature and the butter washed so that it will be firm and waxy. Rolls or prints of butter should be wrapped in parchment butter paper, placed in a stone crock, and covered with strong brine. Butter should be stored in as cool a place as is available and in a place free from odors likely to be absorbed by the butter.

When Food Sours

Lots of folks who think they have "indigestion" have only an acid condition which could be corrected in five or ten minutes. An effective anti-acid like Phillips Milk of Magnesia soon restores digestion to normal.

Phillips does away with all that sourness and gas right after meals. It prevents the distress so apt to occur two hours after eating. What a pleasant preparation to take! And how good it is for the system! Unlike a burning dose of soda—which is but temporary relief at best—Phillips Milk of Magnesia neutralizes many times its volume in acid.

Next time a hearty meal, or too rich a diet has brought on the least discomfort, try—

At the ferry, Weems voiced his desires to get out again to the coast to make pictures. Fort Lee, he said, was dead. Nothing doing in his East. In the West one could work outside all the year, and his comedies were to be all exterior. Ere the Fort Lee still was ascended, Trent was offered the chance of becoming one of the leaders of the film industry. Weems proved it on the back of an envelope he had wrung from the reluctant Hubbard, who carefully removed the contents before he parted with it. It was difficult to judge from the back of his prospector's head just what effect his eloquence engendered.

"For the love of Mike," he said, as Trent passed David More's little store, "say something."

"I'll think it over," he was told. "To begin with, I'd like to see how pictures are made."

Weems took this as encouragement. "You shall see everything the studio has to show," he declared. "They know me."

Weems was disappointed that Trent decided not to permit wholesale presentations. Weems grumbled about it to the girls.

"I'd have introduced him to all the big ones, whether I know 'em or not. I don't get him at all. He seems more interested in the mechanics of the game than the other parts," Weems added. "Look at him, will you?"

Trent was asking questions of a technical director when he could have talked with a star!

"He must have money," said the lead a little wistfully. Look, Horace, the studio manager is talking to him now."

"I had to tell the old grafter I'd got new money in," Weems said a trifle apprehensive as to his immediate future. "That release is bound to come, and then I can pay up everything. If they crowd me too much they'll lose it all."

"So will you and me," said the lady soberly.

The studio manager merely said that if Mr. Trent had an interest in the Horace Weems Productions, would he be responsible for their financial indebtedness?

"I will not," Trent said concisely. "To begin with, Mr. Weems has stated that the company has all assets and no liabilities."

"He's behind on last week's studio rental. Here's the statement."

Trent looked over the items. He was no more anxious than another man to waste his money, but he accompanied the manager to his office and paid the accounts. He did not give the money because he felt any responsibility for Weems, and he did not aim at production. He was willing to settle the bill because he had certain definite knowledge to acquire and had given himself a week to get it in.

"I'm going down to the village," Trent told Weems. "I shall be back in half an hour."

David More was finishing a story in a magazine devoted to light fiction when Anthony Trent came in. He had read of the Deal Beach exploits, and was peculiarly interested. He thought he understood now why his client had been so anxious to learn the details he had been set to gather.

"Here's another commission," Trent said in the security of a small parlor at the rear. I want to rent for as short a term as possible a house with large grounds running down to the Hudson. I don't care what sort of repair the house is in or what you have to pay. There's a place I have in mind somewhere north of Ossining which was empty when I passed through the town last. It's the kind of rundown estate not modern enough to attract the rich commuter and too expensive for middle-class purses to keep up. Here's some money for a deposit if necessary. I'll come and sign a lease when you've got a few to select from. Remember that I must have grounds that are not over-looked. Also I must have an uninterrupted view of the river."

When Trent saw Weems again he looked upon a different man. Now that the embargo was removed, Horace was feverishly finishing a comedy. "What picture is being made over there?" Trent asked.

"A six-reel special," Weems returned. "A crook story. Go and take a peek."

The studio manager introduced Trent to the director and stars and answered his many questions.

When Trent got back to the Van Boden apartment he was possessed of a vast amount of information. He was having to pay for it, but the price would be cheap if the end he sought were attained.

Later in the evening he called up Mrs. Kinney, spoke a little to Sutton and then talked to Mademoiselle Dupin.

"You haven't forgotten tomorrow, I hope."

"Not for a moment," she returned. "I shall be waiting at nine. It seems a shame we cannot bring poor Captain X." The names of the immured were never mentioned. "Would it not be possible?"

"It would be far too dangerous." While this was true, Anthony Trent could not conceal from himself that he did not want a third person on the trip. Sutton was already fortunate in having Mademoiselle so close at hand.

CHAPTER X

Confessions

Trent was conscious of a certain restraint between him and Mademoiselle Dupin during the first few miles of the journey. She had made up her mind that she would not add to the many obligations she was under. And yet to broach the subject seemed ungracious. But at the apartment they were so rarely alone that here, aboard, was the only opportunity.

For his part, Anthony Trent was thinking how little he knew of this beautiful and accomplished woman and how much money he desired to learn. What, he wondered, was her early history?

Late in the Evening He Called Up Mrs. Kinney.

The launch was a fast one, and soon overhauled a liner going through the harbor shipping at half speed.

"It's the Brabant," he exclaimed, and told the steersman to go as close to her as he could.

"I came over in her," Trent told the girl at his side, "and met a very decent sort of purser aboard. I've an idea I can use him if he is still there. She should be back here in exactly twenty days. I had a fearful quarter of an hour on that staunch ship when I left Dover." He told her of his interview with the inquiring purser.

"The tragedy with people like us," she said gravely, "is that there must always be the fear of such interviews."

"I know," he answered, a little gloomily. "That very thought is never far away from me. I can never be certain that some one hasn't devoted just as much thought to getting me as I have given to evading capture. I mistrust people on whom I ought to rely. I am invariably looking for motives. Sometimes I think I have slain the ability to enjoy people."

"Am I not to be trusted?" she asked. "You are different," he answered. "You can understand because you have suffered too. That is why you and I should always be good friends. I know you will never go back to the old life. Yet how many men who have lived better lives than I could you convince? Collective prejudices send innumerable men back to the crime they want to escape."

"Didn't you enjoy the Grant house party?" she asked, after a silence. "Not at first. In the beginning I felt every man was watching me suspiciously."

"We pay," she sighed, "whether in prison or out of it."

"All this isn't very cheerful, is it?" he returned. "I suggested this trip to keep you in good spirits, and we both drift into morbid moods."

He reached for his glasses. "What do you see?" she asked. "The good ship La Belle Alliance in the offing."

A number of small craft passed and repassed the stranded vessel. She lay pathetically on her side, a mass of rusty red and faded black. Apparently none of the Grant household was on the private beach.

"I wonder if Mrs. Grant will let me go back," said Mademoiselle Dupin when the launch was headed for home.

"Surely you don't want to go back?" he cried.

"Why not?" she answered. "I can not remain where I am any longer. I shall never cease to be grateful for what you have done. Some day I may be able to repay you. I can never forget what you rescued me from. But you must see I cannot be a burden to you any longer."

"Burden!" he scoffed. "That is absurd." Nevertheless he saw that nothing would alter her. "If you must go I cannot hold you back, but please don't go back to Deal yet. That might upset my plans and bring suspicion on you. Do me this favor. Stay on with Mrs. Kinney until my scheme for Sutton succeeds or fails. You are putting me under obligations. He was morose and gloomy till you went there, and I want him at his best. Don't go back on me now," he pleaded.

"If I can believe I am helping you it is different," she said, "but I only suspect more of your generosity."

"Sometimes you have looked at me," she said, "as though you wanted to know about my past. I have felt it as strongly as if you had spoken."

"You cannot imagine how much I have wanted to know," he returned, "but I haven't any right to ask."

"I think I should like you to know. My father was Russian and my mother French. They died when I was quite young. For years I was at a convent in Paris. My guardian was a Colonel Ogilvie, who had been to, a time in the Russian service with my father. There was very little money left from the estate. My father was suspected of liberal tendencies and his lands confiscated. Yet, when I joined Colonel Ogilvie and his friend Count von Schonbrunn in Cannes, it was given out I was an heiress. I was not yet eighteen. They took a splendid house for me, which was in reality a gambling establishment, although I did not know it. There is much money among the visitors to Cannes. Nice and Pau, and there was a vast profit in the house. The police broke up the establishment at Cannes. So we moved to Nice, where there was a scandal about crooked play. And so on in other cities. You may believe me or not, but I was kept in ignorance of this I was convent-bred and had been taught obedience to my guardian. I married Count de Beaulieu before I was twenty. He thought I was an heiress, and my guardian and Von Schonbrunn thought he was the head of the rich branch of his family. In stead, he had nothing. When it all came to light, he left me. I had news of his death while you were staying in Old Westbury."

"I remember," Trent said. It was this death which had seemed to clear the way for her marriage to Captain Monmouth, the man who had repudiated her so strangely.

"After he left me, and I found out what sort of a man my guardian was, I joined the rest of them, knowing full well their way of life. I think I wanted to avenge myself on all men I was in London for a season and then came here. You know what I was here. That is all."

Her story was very much what Trent had imagined it to be. Certainly she had more excuse for her career than he had for his. He believed her wholly when she said she had been for so long in ignorance of the men surrounding her.

"Are there any people over here, men and women with whom you were associated in the Riviera, who might recognize you?"

(TO BE CONTINUED.)

Napoleon's Task Not Finished Until 1918

When the great cathedral of Notre Dame was alight with 10,000 softly waving candle flames and while a pope, brought from Rome to Paris, was preparing, in the presence of the most august assemblage that Europe could gather, to place an emperor's crown on Napoleon's head, Napoleon turned and whispered to his brother, "What would father say if he could see me now?" And the next moment, when the pope was ready to crown him, Napoleon firmly removed the emblem from the papal hands and placed the crown upon his own brow.

Kings and emperors are not born; you can make as great a king by artificial processes, provided you've got a brain under the crown, says W. G. Shepherd, in the Mentor. Born kings make trouble; made kings are just as good as born kings; probably better.

That's what Napoleon kept arguing and trying to prove all his life. This contention made the born kings angry. The anger drove them together. They finally whipped Napoleon and sent him to St. Helena. He couldn't whip the born kings. He tried that 100 years too soon. The world didn't whip the divine-right born kings until 1918. I wonder if Napoleon knows that we polished off the job he tried to do.

Ghost City Seems to Be Suspended in Air

The silent city of Alaska, the famous mirage which appears occasionally above the great Muir glacier, was observed again recently by tourists from the deck of the steamship Aleutian. The phantom of the air looked very much like an ancient fortified city, with spires and towers, hanging some distance above the glacier. The singular phenomenon is believed to be caused by the distortion of icy pinnacles and peaks.

The appearance of the Alaska mirage is always preceded by the forming of a stock of mist along the horizon where probably two air currents meet, due to condensation of atmospheric moisture by the chill of the sea. The mist soon apparently dissolves and the magic picture begins to lift itself up in the distance, with all the formations, like a motion picture film being focused on the screen.

Once last season the phantom reversed and the strange image appeared upside down, the tips of the towers and the minarets looking, as if they were dipping into the sea.

Russia Good to Doctors

Lawyers are not very popular in Soviet Russia, but physicians are. Recently many restrictive measures against lawyers have been proposed, but the doctors are going to have their salaries raised. The presidium of the central executive committee has just announced the scale of increase: Beginning in the year 1928-9, physicians are to have a raise of not more than 20 per cent every three years, but after three such increases the raises stop. Psychiatrists are first on the list for the boost.

WHAT DR. CALDWELL LEARNED IN 47 YEARS PRACTICE

A physician watched the results of constipation for 47 years, and believed that no matter how careful people are of their health, diet and exercise, constipation will occur from time to time. Of next importance, then, is how to treat it when it comes. Dr. Caldwell always was in favor of getting as close to nature as possible, hence his remedy for constipation, known as Dr. Caldwell's Syrup Pepsin, is a mild vegetable compound. It can not harm the system and is not habit forming. Syrup Pepsin is pleasant-tasting, and youngsters love it.

Dr. Caldwell did not approve of drastic physics and purges. He did not believe they were good for anybody's system. In a practice of 47 years he never saw any reason for their use when Syrup Pepsin will empty the bowels just as promptly.

Do not let a day go by without a bowel movement. Do not sit and hope, but go to the nearest drugget and get one of the generous bottles of Dr. Caldwell's Syrup Pepsin, or write "Syrup Pepsin," Dept. BB, Monticello, Illinois, for free trial bottle.

Protect your homes by locking all doors and windows when you leave the premises.

There's a reason why "ABERDEEN" satisfies. Try it.

Girl (admiring Ed's new tie): "Oh, what a cute tie. I wish I had a dress made out of that."

Babe Ruth II
Mother: "You never come into the house without making an attack on that dish of doughnuts."
Tommy: "That's all right, mom; you see a home run doesn't count unless a feller hits the plate."

She: "Will you tell me if this is the third turn to the right after the left turn at the second cross roads?"

Lawyer: "Then you say that this man was drunk?"
Witness: "I did not. I simply said that he sat in his car for three hours in front of an excavation, waiting for the light to turn green."

All the average girl of today knows about a needle is that a fiber one is no good for jazz records.

"A car?" stormed the angry father. "Of course you can't have a car! Why, you would be absolutely helpless if you found yourself with a flat tire."
"Oh, no, I wouldn't, Daddy," the daughter retorted. "I've given flat tires the air before this."

We carry a complete line of Builders' Hardware.

The whole family owns the car. That is, when the car is idle it is mother's car, when it is in use it is the children's car, and when disabled or with a tire down, it is dad's car.
